

GREAT LIBEL SUIT GOES ON ITS WAY

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Syracuse, April 20.—The bottom has not dropped out of the William Barnes-Theodore Roosevelt libel suit.

Those who thought it had, when they, late yesterday, heard the "take it all back" speech of John M. Bowers, who argued the dismissal motion made by Colonel Roosevelt, had another thing coming.

To correct the apparent impression that the defense had "laid down" counsel for the colonel at midnight issued the following statement:

"For the purpose of correcting the erroneous impression which seems to have been created, counsel for Colonel Roosevelt, says:

"The motion was merely intended to be the usual one in the conduct of such a case and in no way implied any change in the position of the defendant.

The defense will proceed along its original lines. There was not and is not now any intention to deviate therefrom. Mr. Bowers in the latter part of his argument was simply discussing the legal situation which attached to the article as published in the absence of an innuendo which under well recognized rules of law requires if possible a harmless construction of the language, if such construction is considered by the court to be possible. The motion having been denied the defense will now proceed to prove the allegations set up in the answer of Colonel Roosevelt. The question was purely a legal one and in no way involved a change of front as to the facts."

Interest in the political libel suit did not flag today, though the proceedings lacked the spectacular through the absence of a gallery. There were half a thousand people, including many women, who waited in the corridors of the Onondaga county court house for admission to the court room. But Justice William S. Andrews's orders that only those who could find seats be admitted, were strictly adhered to, and those who did not get in quickly went away.

Naturally when only 300 persons, fifty of them newspapermen, were in the room, the interest and excitement was lacking.

When court resumed at 10 o'clock today for its second session, William Mills (counsel for William Barnes), and John M. Bowers for Colonel Roosevelt, made the opening speeches to the jury.

After the dismissal of the Roosevelt motion late yesterday to dismiss the complaint, no further dilatory tactics were expected from either side.

The great battle was on, with the forty-two centimeter guns, seventy-five's, howitzers and superdreadnoughts lined up for action. The colonel had done all he could, with dignity, to avert the engagement.

The ex-state chairman had refused all overtures of the enemy, and no further efforts at peace were possible. The greatest political scrap of two decades was under way.

After the opening guns of libel and Bowers, Mr. Barnes's first witnesses were three New York city newspaper men, who were expected to prove the "corpus delicti"—the publication of the former president's libel of the Empire state G. O. P. boss, when he on July 22, 1914, said that Barnes was in league with Charles Francis Murphy, boss of New York's Tammany Hall, to distribute patronage.

WHY BE A BOY SCOUT?

Some Excellent Reasons Fully and Concisely Presented.

The Boy Scout organization is the largest boys' club in the world.

If your boy is of suitable age you should let him join. All healthy boys are as eager to get into this club as a monkey is eager to get sugar.

Many people, alive to the danger of encouraging war ideas, are afraid this movement will tend to increase the poison of militarism in the youth. It takes only a little acquaintance with the ideals taught and the practices employed by the Boy Scouts to dispel this error.

To be in the scheme is military. There is a deal of good in military training. Some day the whole business world will be co-ordinated in military efficiency.

The good consists in the discipline, team play, manliness, and grit developed by military exercises. There is no reason why an army should be autocratic, caste-cursed, and tyrannical. Composed of democratic ideals, where each unit intelligently foregoes his individual will for the benefit of organized efficiency, an army is vastly more effective than where soldiers are whipped to battle and then beaten in time of peace.

Every boy in the United States should belong to the Boy Scouts. They would learn manliness.

They would increase their personal effectiveness. They would cease to be sorry for themselves and learn to be failures, physical hurt or any pain of body or mind, 25 men should bear such things, bravely.

They would learn to despise the very things that nation wars are based on, such as race hate, narrow and deformed patriotism, cruelty and selfishness.

They would learn to be self-reliant, to be clean, strong, frank, kind, and generous.

The Boy Scouts are not soldiers in the making; they are men, citizens, in the making.

They are taught and drilled in these arts: To help the unfortunate, to aid the wounded, to save the drowning, to take care of themselves, doing their own cooking, washing, and camping; to tie a knot, to chop a tree, to tell the truth and to obey, to live in the open air, to be respectful, reverential, and fearless, and above all to be good sports, which means to take defeat or success as real men and not as cry babies.

The Boy Scout organization is the great outdoor school; and, best of all, it is a great school of democracy where the boys manage themselves.

David Starr Jordan of the Leland Stanford, Jr., University, says: "We want you, Boy Scouts, for braver things than war."

"It is a soldier's business to fight and to kill. It is a Boy Scout's business to help and save."

"When this hideous war is over all the nations will be filled with hate, for without hate there could be no war. It was for you to try to overcome this spirit, to help us all to realize that men are men, wherever they may live or whatever language they may speak."

Suit for Alienation.

Albert G. Hunter of Rhinebeck has brought an action to recover $10,000 damages from Dr. Albert S. Dederick of that place for the alienation of his wife's affections. The case will come up at White Plains on April 23. Mrs. Hunter has retaliated by bringing an action for separation from her husband for abandonment. Mrs. Hunter claims her husband closed the house and sold off all her furniture and went to live with his father. She was compelled to go to her mother's home in Poughkeepsie. In answering the allegations in her husband's suit for alienation she claims that the physician never came to her home except when she or her husband were ill. Alimony and counsel fees are asked.

Coombs, in addition to contributing a three-bagger for the Athletics, batted well. The Mountain School appear to have got quickly into their stride and look like having a smart, quick-working side. Whitaker, having passed the three score and ten mark of a busy life, is no longer able to engage in active work, but his wife who is much younger, possesses all that is commendable in womanly graces of character and habits. Active and faithful in all departments of church work, and so helpful in the community in many ways, that to say she will be greatly missed does not half express the deep feeling of regret that is expressed by all who knew her intimately. Such families are becoming all too rare in Glasco, yet however much we may regret their leaving, the best wishes of the whole community will follow them to their new homes.

STREET OILING WORK BEGINS

Street Superintendent Van Keuren started on Monday oiling Albany avenue. As the surface of the road was in bad shape he is using a hot asphalt oil and covering it with rock screenings after which the street is paved. There are thirty men employed on the work which is expected to be practically completed today. Now that the state is expected to improve this road as a system of the state highway it was thought to be unnecessary to scarify and reoil the street. With the rolling of the present road it has been put in fine shape. The heavy asphalt, which was so objectionable to many housewives, will probably not be used on many streets except where actually needed. The car of oil now on hand will be exhausted with the oiling of Albany avenue. Abel street will be treated to the same process to protect the work done by the street force the past summer. On other streets a lighter oil, similar to the dustolene used in former years, will be spread to lay the dust.

Entertainment at Kripplush.

Once again people who are the true lovers of amateur theatrical performances may give vent to their submerged royal feelings by being present at the Lodge Hall, Kripplush, on Friday evening, April 23, at 8 o'clock. As the great heavenly luna lightens up the dark and dreary outside world so the brilliant Stone Ridge Mormal Camp Fire Stars will brighten the hearts of the audience by the play entitled "Dorothy's Experiment," which was previously acted at Stone Ridge to the delight of a much pleased audience. Then, like the dessert of a Thanksgiving dinner, they will render with most appropriate stage setting, their famous camp fire songs and some popular airs. Prohibition will not destroy our appetite, while total abstinence only adds coal to the smoldering fire of desire.

On account of teachers' conference, held at the home of the district superintendent in Kingston, there was no school on Friday. An interesting session was reported. ## Cannot Lose Real Good.

We cannot lose any real good. Friends pass from our sight, but our lives are the stronger and more beautiful for that friendship. Effort and achievement are forgotten, but the long-ago struggle and the victory won are armor for new contests today. Happiness lives on as sweet memories. Self-sacrifice abides as unselfishness. Whatever of good we have known, is ours as long as we love the good.

PRINCIPLES OF THE KNIGHTS OF TODAY

The principal address at the Knights of Columbus anniversary celebrated Monday evening was made by Vincent A. Gorman, who after reviewing knighthood as it was understood in medieval times and giving a most interesting historical sketch of the ceremonies connected with the conferring of knighthood, spoke of "The Knights of Today" as follows:

The Knights of Columbus must be valorous and brave not alone as the knights of old at the tournament or in the clash of arms but on the never ending battle field of life on the firing line before the enemy who would rob him of his most precious inheritance, his birthright in the Catholic Church and his right of faith in the free land of America. We all know from experience that it costs something to be a Catholic, even in these enlightened days we have learned that despite the glorious spirit of broad mindedness that we had learned to believe had made all bigotry and narrowmindedness an unpleasant page of past history that there are some in this year of our Lord 1915, who still look at us askance and suspect that as Catholics we have something up our sleeves something concealed. Sad as it may seem there are some still who (there are over a million) delight in the filth and gutter tales of the Menace, and who would rather take their estimate of the Catholic citizens who live beside and among them and whose lives are on an open book, from the filthy sheet mangers out in a town somewhere in the wilds of Missouri.

Yes fellow knights sometimes it costs to be a Catholic and a Knight of Columbus but what is there worth while that does not cost? The knight of today must be no moral coward and if he be worthy, there can be no prouder boast even when it costs than to say, "Yes I am a Roman Catholic."

The knight of today like his prototype of the days of old is found ready and willing to assist the weak and to help the oppressed of his own order or those who are not. This council gave an instance of true knighthood when recently in response to an appeal it sent its contribution to a Rev. Father of Denver, Col., who sought to defend the sacred honor and the honor of the priesthood against a most foul libel, issued by the principal of the high school in that city. We received word only a few weeks ago that the high school principal brought to time by the prompt invocation of law has humbly retracted his statement and admitted the falsity of the charge in every particular, by the aid of the Knights of Columbus, the snake was scotched.

The Catholic Knights of Columbus though but thirty-three years in existence have increased in number marvelous. As true Knights they have done much to promote Catholic education. They contributed $500,000 to found a chair of history in the Catholic University. They have again contributed $500,000 to found fifty scholarships. One great feature of their work has been the dissemination of Catholic information to non-Catholics thereby removing many false ideas and apparent causes for bigotry.

The Catholic Knight of Columbus is distinguished for his courtesy and his self denial in the cause of the order. He keeps ever before him the high ideals of unity, fraternity, charity and truth and patriotism and guided by these watchwords he stands united with his brothers in the spirit of brotherly love and hears in his heart even to those who despise all for he knows that in the end truth shall prevail and while at times the outlook may be gloomy and he may have misgivings as to the ultimate appreciation of our motives and our actions, yet he can not but realize that the greatest of human movements have seemed at times doomed to failure. Columbus the noble patron of our order died a broken hearted and disappointed man, with the stamp of failure on his life in the view of his contemporaries.

And now fellow Knights of Columbus and friends let us gird ourselves with the sword of truth. Let us so live that our lives shall confuse and confound those who condemn and those who would destroy. Let the characteristics of the old knighthood animate the new knighthood of the twentieth centuries. Let valour, loyalty, courtesy and magnanimity be ever in evidence in our deeds that future generations may look to us for examples of nobility. That our standards of chivalry may for ages to come animate and inspire generations yet unborn. So that when the tale of these days comes to be written we may pass on to other times, traditions of chivalrous conduct, of unflinching religious principles, of uncompromising devotion to our native land and all that her precious heritage and freedom means to us and to ours.

I pray that for you and for me and for those whom we hold dear our future years may not be darkened by the cloud of bigotry or oppression, which is so wont to appear from behind the mountain in the west that the noble and chivalrous lives of our Catholic Knights of Columbus of today deeply imbued as they are with religious spirit and with a love of country and all that this great land of ours stands for, may awaken in the hearts of our fellow Americans a realization of their good qualities; that an enlightened Americanism may drive from our midst the base detractor and the foul mouthed calumniator our Holy religion and our Knightly order; that Protestant and Catholic, Jew and Gentile may ever dwell in peace and harmony with their fellows in the land of the free and the home of the brave; to the utter confusion of all who would disrupt and destroy this greatest, this most glorious, this noblest nation that ever came from the hand of God.

How Many Yards of Muslin in a Bale of Cotton?

A couple months ago there was a general cry, "Help the South, Buy a Bale of Cotton!" We bought a bale and had a southern mill weave it into one continuous piece of 76-inch-wide sheeting. The sheeting is now on display in our window.

How many yards of sheeting did the bale of cotton make? From Wednesday, April 21, to Saturday, May 1st, we will give one estimate with every 25c purchase, and the person estimating nearest the number of yards we will give FIVE DOLLARS IN GOLD; the next nearest we will give A FIVE DOLLAR DOLL; third nearest, $2.50 in merchandise; to the fourth, fifth and sixth, $1.00 in merchandise anywhere in the store.

The number of yards the roll contains will be kept an absolute secret. Not even our salespeople will know until the day the guesses are counted. Merchants and salespeople in stores that carry dry goods not eligible to guess.

There will be no limit to the number of guesses. You can register a different guess for each 25c purchase. During this guessing contest we will put on sale at specially reduced prices all cotton goods made in the south. You will not only run a chance of getting one of the prizes by buying here during this sale, but you will save from 15 to 25 per cent on staple and wanted merchandise.

KINGSTON, N. Y., APRIL 20, 1915.

Tammany Hall leaders decided last night that the organization headquarters should be moved further uptown. It will be unfortunate. It required one man who was prominent in public life in New York State for many years to be nominated for the Presidency before he knew where Tammany Hall was located, and in amazement he exclaimed, "So this is Tammany Hall!" Now that the eminent ex-candidate knows where Tammany Hall is, he might live for years after removal of the headquarters to another part of Manhattan before he discovered the new site, and for a politician who is actively engaged in taking care of his friends such a calamity would amount almost to a catastrophe.

After winning every battle he has fought for a couple of years and bragging that he was invincible, Gen. Villa, the friend of Wilson and Bryan, has just been severely trounced three times in succession by Gen. Obregon. Perhaps the explanation lies in the fact that when Villa got into the City of Mexico a few months ago he partook of intoxicating drinks for the first time in his life. He was reported to have been pleased with the experience and doubtless has kept up the habit since. If the experience of Europe is taken as a guide, we may justly infer that the Demon Rum has proved a valuable ally to Obregon. Villa's only hope appears to be to send a quantity of strong drink to his adversary, so that both will be on the same footing.

Judge Gemmill of the Municipal Court of Chicago has decided that if a man is served with drinks in a saloon on Sunday he does not have to pay for them. This ought to be pleasing news to the Anti-Saloon League. Its agents, with their well-known capacity can make Sunday liquor selling so disastrously unprofitable that it will cease. We suppose that the same principle of law holds good regarding payment for other forms of merchandise the sale of which is forbidden on the first day of the week. If a workman in this State labors more than six consecutive days we suppose that his employer can get out of paying him. It is a familiar maxim that all contracts made on Sunday are void, and while there are exceptions to the rule it is nearly enough correct to enable persons willing to take advantage of it to satisfy their requirements with little, if any, work.

That was an interesting argument of Colonel Roosevelt's counsel that there was "nothing personal" in his statement that William Barnes had entered a corrupt alliance with Charles F. Murphy. "It was certainly nothing more," said Mr. Bowlers, "than the ordinary political attack which has been made from time immemorial in the history of this country." The presiding judge could not take this view of the matter. If Mr. Barnes actually betrayed a trust in the way charged, Mr. Roosevelt did a public service in exposing him, and he should have no difficulty in proving that he told the truth. If, on the contrary, Barnes did nothing of the kind, Roosevelt was guilty of a cowardly libel for which he should be made to smart. The custom of making false charges, no matter how "immemorial" it is, should be stopped. It is demoralizing to our political life, since the citizen who is unable to discriminate gets the impression that all public men are crooked. A politician should be as jealous as a business man of his reputation.

Sunday brought its usual crop of automobile accidents throughout the country. A few people were killed, a few sustained broken bones and serious abrasions, and nearly everyone received some sort of injury. In none of the cases reported was the accident due to any structural fault of the cars that were being operated. Imperfect cars are still the cause of accidents, but imperfections in construction have been reduced to a minimum because manufacturers cannot afford to take chances. The fault lies principally in the desire to speed and in failure to observe other vehicles. The desire to show off seizes many an automobile owner or chauffeur on Sunday. The desire may be present during other days of the week, but it springs into activity on Sunday. With men who are able to make long runs only one day in the week, it is natural that they should desire to cover as much ground as possible if they care only for speed and are satisfied to miss the scenic effects which can be appreciated best by traveling at moderate speed, but why men who are willing to travel on the safety first principle for six days of the week should insist on speeding up on Sunday when travel is so much greater is explainable only on the theory of foolish pride. The Sunday autist who follows the safety first rule is the exception. Otherwise accidents would be as numerous in proportion to the travel on other days of the week as they are on Sunday.

AN ADJUSTMENT.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

It is easy to fall a prey to the notion that this old world of ours gets in a sorry tangle sometimes and that if we could work out a kink in one spot and tighten up a bit in another, the even tenor of things would jog along smoother and easier. Perhaps it would; maybe not.

But it really seems as if there might be some adjustment when we look on one side the fence and see a naturally sweet, lovable child with disposition all going to waste from lack of control, and on the other view a little man curbed and trained beyond the point of being the true little self nature made him.

One hardly knows which the greater error. Lack of wise leading inspires pity for both parent and child; from its excess the child suffers most, and we must always regret the false judgment which expects too much from tender years, looking to a child to measure up to an ideal not yet attained by the instructor in his longer tutelage.

It is then we would like to call for the useful wand of proportion and somehow straighten things out.

Only a few days ago a young woman told her youthful troubles, meted out by a grandmother, whose harshness and severity were not born of a desire to sadden the young life, but to strengthen it through discipline. All through her early days she was forced through that hard school for a girl which bars out pretty, modern clothes, allowing only the plainest and worst of all, those that approach the outlandish.

It seems a small hardship, in a way, but sensitive childhood bitterly feels the taunts of playmates, and it is unjust to enforce discipline that covers such rigid rulings.

Many years have passed, and though the training may have strengthened and developed, the grandmother is remembered with a note of bitterness, and in a large way, the Spartan training defeated its own ends.

In a period when laxity is in greater evidence than sternness it is the more striking when one feels minded to ask a parent to lessen the tension a bit and give the child a chance for individuality, even though he steps over the line to a degree. A child cannot reach man's estate at a bound, and it is not fair to hold too tight a rein.

"Must" has its place, and a mighty wise, wholesome place it is; but, remembering how we older folk sometimes long for things and yield when judgment plainly, loudly says "no," we can well afford once in a while to give a child a little more leeway than the best judgment dictates.

That was wise advice given by one of our most successful teachers to a young enthusiast who, rightly enough, placed discipline high in her course of training. His laconic remark covered the comprehensive: "Don't see everything that goes on in the schoolroom."

There must be a little ground for natural expansion, which may come times lean a degree the wrong way and yet not involve serious offense or lasting result, and sympathy always goes out to the child made to follow too close a line, disciplined in ways that impose a real burden or set him apart from his young associates.

It is only the occasional parent who forgets the days when fractions were a serious bugbear or grammar a nightmare and expects the little man to grasp his small problems almost at sight; and when he does someone should sing the refrain:

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in thy flight, Make me a child again just for tonight!"

For it is discouraging when a child feels that in spite of faithful work he always falls in the rear of parental hopes and expectations, and while the call generally is more urgent for ambitious work and discipline, there are some quarters where the need is rather for lightening and tempering the demands.

And these are the extremes upon which we would like to work a nice adjustment, until with the attainment of physical and mental growth a measure of development was developed, still carrying some of the real glamor we hoped to see.

FRANCES SHAFPER.

"I lost five rubbers," the bridge fiend was confiding to her neighbor. "Great snakes, Maria!" gasped the ruralite through his alfalfa. "The woman's a centipede!"—Buffalo Express.

"Have you been making any progress since my last visit to Crimmon Gulch?" asked the serious stranger. "Yes. Ever since some whist players struck the town we have been more refined. They didn't last long, but their influence lingers. Every time a player says he can open a jackpot everybody around the table says, 'Pray do.'"—Washington Star.

Fanning the Flame.

Harold S. Vanderbilt at a dinner of the Motor Car Touring Society, said of dancing:

"The tango and the maxixe and other dances are not so popular as they were. The craze is dying out. It would have died out earlier but for the talk."

"Don't you think these new dances are frightfully immoral?" a bishop said to me last year.

"No, I don't," I answered; "and it's your saying they are immoral that keeps them so deuced fashionable."—New York World.

Nearly Stung.

"Let me out of this building!" exclaimed the book agent. "What's your hurry?" inquired the elevator man. "Don't you try to get me into conversation. I used to think that sign, 'No solicitors allowed in this building,' was a slight. But it's a blessing and a safeguard. I'm a good book agent, but I don't want to do any more business around here."

"Haven't you sold anything?" "Not a volume—and I came pretty near buying 500 shares of mining stock."—Washington Star.

Cut it Out.

A good theatrical story was told by Jerome K. Jerome at the O. F. Club dinner to dramatic authors. "I spoke to an eminent producer not long ago," he said, "about a play a young friend of mine had sent to him. He remembered it. 'Ah, yes,' he said. 'Not at all bad. There's an idea in it.' Later on it was produced and after the show I went behind. 'Well,' said the eminent producer, 'what did you think of it?' 'Oh, all right!' I said. 'It seems all correct. But what about that idea?' He didn't seem to understand. 'The idea,' I reminded him; 'you said there was an idea in it.' He remembered then. 'Ah, yes,' he said. 'Yes. We had to cut that out.'"—Pall Mall Gazette.

His Job.

A lumber buyer was staying over night in a little farm house in the backwoods of northern Georgia. The man of the house did nothing but sit by the fire and chew tobacco. The lumberman had told how he had held his job for seven years.

"You got me beat," said the old creeper. "I've only held mine for six years."

"What is your job?" asked the lumberman.

"Oh, I sit by de fire and watch dat de kids don't fall in."

"What do you do in the summer?" he asked.

The Superb Boston English Opera Chorus and Augmented Orchestra
under direction of Basil Horsfall.

"The most artistic performance of 'Il Trovatore' ever taken on tour," is the verdict of Press and Public.

The Boston English Opera Company is as different from the average opera company as a New York production is from a repertoire company.

They do only the one opera "IL TROVATORE," and every energy has been directed to make that one opera a real production.

The cast headed by Joseph F. Sheehan, one of the world's greatest "Mantrios," has been especially selected for this one opera. The production also was built for "IL TROVATORE" only and is complete in every detail.

The prices are exceedingly reasonable for such an organization and criticisms from other cities unite in proclaiming it the most artistic and complete production of "IL TROVATORE" ever taken on tour.

MEDICAL EXPERT BILL BECOMES LAW

Governor Whitman signed on Monday the act advocated by Judge Clearwater, chairman of the Medical Expert Testimony committee of the New York State Bar Association, and chairman of the joint committees of the New York Academy of Medicine,
the New York State Homeopathic Medical Society and the Society of Medical Jurisprudence, amending the consolidated laws so as to provide that in any criminal action or proceeding, or in any special proceeding instituted by the writ of habeas corpus or certiorari to enquire into the cause of detention in which the soundness of mind of a person is in issue, the court in which or the judge or justice before whom the action or special proceeding is pending, may appoint not more than three disinterested competent physicians to examine such person as to his soundness of mind at the time of the examination.

Any such examining physician may be sworn as a witness at the instance of any party to the action or proceeding, and the compensation for such examining physician for making such examination and testifying when certified by the presiding judge or justice of the court, or judge or justice making the appointment, shall be paid out of any funds available for the payment of and in the same manner as other court expenses.

The object of this act, which has been most strenuously fought by second rate specialists in alienist cases, is to provide for the appointment by the court entirely disinterested physicians of the first rank in any county, who can testify in any cause involving the sanity of any person, and whose compensation shall not be dependent upon the party calling them as a witness.

Judge Clearwater has pressed this bill for five years. Three times it passed the senate, and failed in the assembly; once it passed both houses,
and was disapproved by a governor.
Always he has had the support of physicians of the first rank in every county in the state.

mixer was brought down to the cor-

for the Ferry street brick pavement.
Street Superintendent Van Keuren expects to have the job completed within three weeks.

Costly Song Birds.

Game Protector Fred DeWitt of this city caught Michael Greener, a Portersville Italian, in the act of shooting song birds near that place and haled him before Justice William D. Burhans in Saugerties, who imposed a fine of $51.50. Besides violating the law by shooting song birds, Greener had no hunting license.

BARNES RESTS HIS LIBEL SUIT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Syracuse, April 20.—William Barnes rested his $50,000 libel suit against Theodore Roosevelt today after only five minutes of direct testimony. The plaintiff's only direct witness was John McGrath of Oyster Bay, private secretary to Colonel Roosevelt, who testified that he took and delivered to the newspapers and press associations of New York the Roosevelt statement of which Barnes complained. Mr. McGrath will be examined at the afternoon session but Mr. Barnes stated that he would offer no further testimony to prove the published libel. The main Barnes' evidence will come in rebuttal.

All preliminary formalities were out of the way and there was no possibility of the action being dismissed or delayed. John McGrath, Roosevelt's private secretary, established the basis of Barnes' complaint by testifying that he gave to the New York newspapers and press associations the Roosevelt statement, of which Barnes complains.

Festival Chorus Work Progressing.

In spite of many other attractions and events last evening, there was a large and enthusiastic rehearsal of the Kingston chorus of the spring musical festival held at the Y. M. C.
A. building last evening. Norman Coke-Jephcott conducting. An enthusiastic chorus was also started in Highland, the Music Study Club being the responsible movers of the project in that village, and therefore assuring its efficient representation at the festival. The meeting was held in the attractive woman's suffrage room, where a full rehearsal will be held on Wednesday evening.
Norman Coke-Jephcott being present at that time. As the musical people of New Paltz are unable, this year to form their own chorus, the Highland chorus has very kindly invited all singers of New Paltz who may be able to do so, to join them at any of their rehearsals. Everywhere the singers are delighted that the oratorio to be sung this year will be "The Creation." Other out-of-town choruses all report progress.

Delightful Entertainment.

The young ladies of the P. V. P.
Club of Ulster Academy afforded their many friends a delightful evening on Monday, when the presented Mrs. Royal A. Bristol, dramatic reader and impersonator. Mrs. Bristol was herself, charming, and gave her audience the greatest pleasure, whether in the tragic "Potion" scene from Romeo and Juliet; in her musical numbers wherein she was accompanied by Miss Myrtle Weber; or in her humorous number. A monologue, entitled "The Photographer's Busy Day" showing six types of visitors to the photograph gallery was excellent as were her dialect stories.
The "Creed of the Bells," was another fine number, and exceedingly touching was the pathos of "One-a-Rose-a." Mrs. Bristol was gracefully introduced to her audience by Miss Edna Silverstein, and the other members of the committee having the entertainment in charge were the Misses Harriet Church, Laura Gil-derleeve, Hazel Beyers, Eleanor Cooper and Edith Tongue.

Police Headquarters Improvement.

The work of converting the present quarters of the police department is now under way. The old locker room is being cleared out in anticipation of replacing it with a lounge room for the officers waiting to go on duty.
In the public room at the first entrance there will be a small enclosure for the sergeant's desk with a private office for the chief of police in the rear and a detention room for prisoners adjoining. An entrance will be made between the present headquarters and the locker room by cutting away some of the wall. With the addition of some paint after the renovation is completed, it will be a welcome contrast with the present dingy appearance of police headquarters.

The New Aerodrome.

The Imperial Amusement Company, William G. Finley, manager, this morning started the work of building an aerodrome on the property adjoining O'Reilly's blacksmith shop on lower Broadway. The work is being done by James Hicks, the contractor. Mr. Hicks is also rebuilding the barn on Railroad avenue now occupied by A. H. Cook of Hotel Ulster and will be converted into a livery stable.

Mr. Leverich's Trip.

Robert Leverich of Ponckhockie left this morning for a three months' trip to California where he will visit the exposition. At the rooms of Cordis hose company on Delaware avenue Monday night Mr. Leverich was given a farewell reception by members of the company who gave him the glad hand and wished for his speedy return. He will visit a short time in Chicago and other places en route.

Telephone Men's Banquet.

This evening the men of the New York Telephone Company will hold a banquet at the Y. M. C. A. at 6:30 o'clock. The chef will be "Gus" Bonesteel, which is all that need be said to those who have enjoyed the past banquets prepared under his supervision.

It is by no mere chance or coincidence that ours is the fastest the store which consists of something more than men who put intelligence into the spending of every dollar which has carried this store forward

CHAUTAUQUA GUARANTORS SQUEAL

At a meeting of the guarantors of Chautauqua held on Monday evening it was discovered that a number of people who last year had signed agreements to take a certain number of tickets for this year's Chautauqua had refused to do so and that unless the tickets were sold to some else it would mean that the local guarantors would have to dig down into their jeans to make up the deficiency of about $500. Some of the members of the local committee were of the opinion that the names of those who had signed for tickets and then refused to accept them should be made public.

Last year when Chautauqua was first held in this city it was brought here on the agreement of thirty of the local men that they would be responsible for the sale of 700 tickets at $2 a ticket, making a total of $1,400. The Chautauqua came and was a success. At the last session tickets or slips were passed through the audience and those desiring to have a Chautauqua here this year signed the ticket or slip stating the number of tickets they agreed to take. In this way it was found that 400 tickets were pledged, which left 300 tickets for the local committee to dispose of.

At the meeting Monday evening, however, it was discovered that nearly two hundred people who had signed these slips last year had since changed their minds and refused to take the tickets.

This means that unless 700 tickets are sold in the city that the local guarantors will have to make up the deficiency. It is likely, however, that the required number will be sold and that the local committee will not have to make up the difference, as the program this year is exceptionally attractive, and well worth the price asked.

"Ignorance of the Law."

Take an innocent little statute. One lawyer (maybe a country counselor) says it is dead. Another lawyer says it is alive. The poor little statute does not know whether it is coming or going, whether it is alive or dead, afoot or horseback. And yet "no man can plead ignorance of the law." A man may go to jail if he does not know the law—unless he is a lawyer. Oh, you Exact Science!—Kansas City Times.

Wisely Planned Eight Room Cottage No. 105

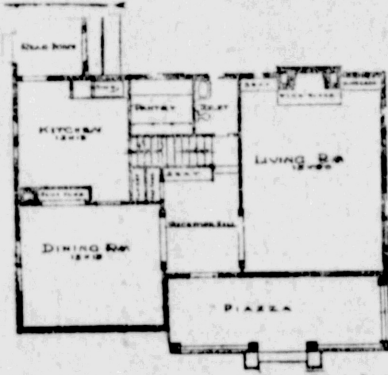

So great is the number of prize-worthy elements incorporated in the cottage illustrated, it might prove libelous to single out any one feature as responsible for the satisfying result. Certainly the half-timber effect at the gables, the artistic bay and the harmonious window designs contribute much to the beauty of the picture. But who will deny that the veranda with its four symmetrical columns is not the most characteristic feature, or claim that the external treatment of cement stucco and apple green trim and roof is not responsible, in part at least, for the homelike appearance of the place. Whatever may be the individual opinion, all must agree that this is an ideal cottage, with many excellent qualities contributing to its individuality, character and quiet dignity.

Passing from the piazza through an entrance door of quartered oak one enters the reception hall, which also serves as the vestibule. Here will be found a hall seat and cloak closet as well as a splendidly conceived staircase. To the rear of the hall, separated by the stairway landing, is a lavatory and toilet, while to the right is the living room. The opening is designed for portieres, but should the owner elect, French doors or a colonnade could be easily substituted. The living room is 15x29 feet, and although it has two group and two single windows in addition to a pair of doors leading to the porch, the arrangement permits of plenty of wall space and a large fireplace with window seats at either side.

14x18, is located on the second floor. There also are two other large chambers, a bath, linen closet, four clothes closets and an alcove. The latter may be converted into a dressing room for the main chamber, if desired. As there is room for two chambers on the third floor, it may be found expedient to utilize one of the second floor chambers for a den. The one at the rear is connected with a sleeping porch, and would be especially well adapted to this purpose.

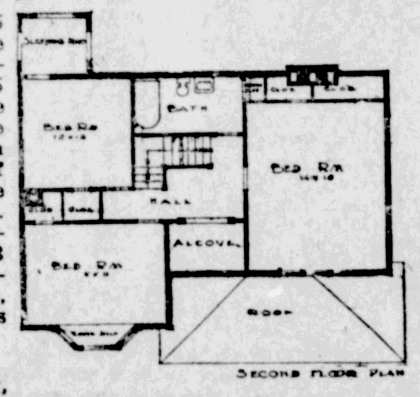

A basement extends under the entire house and is arranged to accommodate vegetable cellar, pantry, laundry and the like.

For detailed plans and estimate of cost consult any local architect or builder whose advertisement appears on this page.

The dining room, which is 13x15 feet in size, is on the front of the house and is reached from the central hall by means of an opening 5 feet wide. This is a duplicate of the one leading to the living room. The dining room has a china closet with leaded glass doors, and by reason of its two group windows, is one of the choicest rooms in the entire house. A double swing door gives quick access to the kitchen, which is 12x13 feet in size, and has the usual conveniences, including closet for stores, pantry and back entry, where room is provided for the refrigerator.

BAHAMA ISLAND SHELLS.

Pearly Treasures of Many Varieties Line the Beaches.

The shores of the Bahama islands are each day strewn with multitudes of beautiful seashells, more than fifty varieties of which have a commercial value in the United States and Europe.

Among these are rice shells, so tiny in size as to make one marvel how a sufficient number could be picked up to fill a barrel; gold shells, mud shells, cockles, bleeding tooth; pretty decorative sun shells, ear-drop shells, which are exported to Odessa, Russia, to be used as ear pendants; Panama or tent shells, which resemble miniature encampments and sell at $30 a barrel; black snails, which take a high polish; conch-kings, queen, ivory, pinklip and trochus or Turk's cap, locally termed "whelks." These are but a few of the assortment kept in stock at the leading warehouses at Nassau.

The queen conch, which is especially adapted for cameo carving on account of having a layer of brown with a white top and the pinklip conch, which has layers of white and pink, are much sought for. Only the lips of these two varieties are exported, the demand coming from New York and from Torre del Greco, near Naples, Italy.

Ordinary conchs sell at 1 cent; pinklip, whole shells, from 5 cents to 25 cents, and queens at 30 cents United States currency in Nassau. The whelk or Turk's cap is particularly valuable, as it has a portion resembling the best mother-of-pearl, from which pearl studs, for instance, could be made.

It is estimated that a million shells of this variety could be obtained annually in this colony. These shells sell for 1 1/2 cents each. Labor is cheap, colored women receiving from 25 to 30 cents, ordinary laboring men 60 cents and white engineers $150 a day.—Indianapolis News.

Study of the Law.

Rabbi Chanan of Zepora said: "The study of the law may be compared to a huge heap of dust that is to be cleared away. The foolish man says, 'It is impossible that I should be able to remove this immense heap; I will not attempt it,' but the wise man says, 'I will remove a little today, some tomorrow and more the day after, and thus in time I shall have removed it all.' It is the same with studying law.—Case and Comment.

GARROS ADDS NEW CHAPTER TO AERIAL WARFARE RECORD.

Roland Garros, conceded to be the most skillful aviator serving with any army, has added new laurels to his fame, by bringing down two German aviators who were attempting to bombard Dunkirk from their biplane. In his fleet monoplane, and singlehanded, Garros rose above the Germans and emptied his automatic pistol at their machine. Both were found shot to death after their machine dropped to earth. Garros alone has accounted for half a dozen German Taubes.

Out to Repel a Night Attack

By OSCAR COX

In the early part of the German invasion of Belgium, when the French were gathering near the border, there was one fortification on the line of French defenses somewhat separated from the rest. The colonel commanding, expecting an attack at any moment, arranged for the discharge of every gun on the outer parapet at once by means of electricity. The electric key was set up in the quarters of Major Moynoux, who was entrusted with its guardianship, that the guns might be fired at the approach of the enemy and might not be fired prematurely.

The commandant, Colonel Du Pierris, was a nervous little man whose principal military maxim was getting ahead of the enemy. He was sufficiently educated as a soldier to know that a favorite hour for surprise in war is 2 o'clock in the morning, when the party to be attacked is wrapped in slumber. Anticipating that the works entrusted to his care might be stormed at that hour, he had arranged a method by which such a terrific onslaught of shot and shell should be poured upon an attacking force as to cause it to recoil, thereby giving time for the gathering of its defenders, who would be routed by the simultaneous firing of so many guns.

Liege had been captured by the Germans and they were sweeping through Belgium. Colonel Du Pierris was very nervous. He had his pickets out some distance from the fort, but an enemy stealthily advancing may seize a picket before he can give an alarm, and the colonel was relying principally on his firing device.

One night the colonel turned in so apprehensive of attack that he did not get to sleep till after midnight. Just before dawn he was awakened by a din that could have been caused only by the firing of his cannon. Starting up he hurried on his outer clothing, and buckling on his sword ran out on to the open space behind the guns, ready to command in the defense. He was met by hundreds of his men, some of whom were taking position at the pieces, some were hurrying for ammunition, while others were forming in line behind the works.

The breeches of the outer tier of guns that had been fired were opened and shells put in some, solid shot in others. As to the inner guns, they were already loaded. In a few minutes the activity ceased, and all stood ready for the coming fray. The colonel, surrounded by his staff, stood on one of the parapets, peering down into the darkness, endeavoring to catch sight of the enemy.

The strain on the men waiting for an attack is hard to bear. Once in the fray action takes the place of suspense, and the latent bulldog in a man's nature enables him not only to bear up, but often perform deeds that are accounted heroism by others. In the present case this strain was prolonged. Ample time elapsed for the garrison to take position, reload the empty pieces and collect ammunition where it was needed. And yet no enemy appeared.

"Captain Le Fevre," said the colonel, "go down there and see what trickery the enemy are up to or whether they have been so discouraged at the reception they have received that they have withdrawn."

The captain saluted, jumped down from the parapet and disappeared in the darkness. The minutes, which seemed hours to the colonel, ticked slowly by, yet there was no sound from beyond the works. Too impatient to stand still, he walked back and forth within a dozen paces, stopping often to listen and expecting every minute to be greeted by a shower of missiles. "Lieutenant Morant," he said presently, "go after Captain Le Fevre and see what has become of him. He may have been taken in by a lurking enemy."

Down dropped Lieutenant Morant, and he, too, disappeared in the darkness.

He had scarcely gone when Captain Le Fevre returned out of breath and reported that he had sent a skirmish line out some distance and had not heard a shot. It was not possible that an enemy could be near the fort.

A suspicion that there had been some mistake about the firing of the guns entered the colonel's brain.

"How far has the skirmish line advanced?" he asked.

"Quite far enough to demonstrate that no enemy could have been seen from our works," was the response.

"Where is Major Moynoux?" asked the colonel. Then, without waiting for a reply, he turned and stalked off toward the major's quarters.

He found that officer engaged in a work that, considering the occasion, was trying to the colonel's temper. The keeper of the firing key was engaged in chasing a rat around the apartment, striking at him with his sword.

"Major!" thundered the colonel. "Colonel," responded the major, pausing from the chase.

"What rat the guns?"

"That rat. He jumped on the electric key."

The men were returned to their slumbers, and in another ten minutes the fort was again silent.

What passed further between the colonel and the major is not known. But certain it is that Major Moynoux was relieved from the charge of the firing room, and a rat trap was placed there near the key.

Japanese "Senki."

In Formosa there is a tree between 2,500 and 3,000 years old, with a circumference of 65 feet, and the lowest branch 45 feet from the ground. The tree is a species of cypress, the Japanese "senki."

When Spencer Tried Vegetarianism. Herbert Spencer tried vegetarianism for about a year, says the London Chronicle. "At the end of that time," he relates, "I went over all that I had written during the year, and concluded it to the fire." Spencer found an exclusively vegetarian diet too bulky, and came to the conclusion that rational life is a compromise. In the matter of diet it is best to strike the happy mean "between the tiger pacing its cage and the cow lying upon the grass."

"BENGER" OF NEW CANAAN

SOCIETY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Egbert A. Seymour of Andover have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mae E., to Clarence Knox of Croton Falls. The bride to be is a nurse at the Hudson River State Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

St. Joseph's Hall on Wednesday evening, April 21, will be the scene of the 13th annual ball of L. A. O. H. Division 5. All arrangements are made for an entertaining and large crowd, as this is a yearly affair, well patronized. An innovation this year will be the introduction during the evening of a few old-time dances, thereby giving those who like to dance the quadrilles and Virginia reels, an extra chance of enjoyment. There will be plenty of modern dances, excellent music being furnished by Muller's orchestra. Refreshments will be served and a general good time assured.

Monday afternoon little Miss Ruth Oliver was tendered a very pleasant surprise party at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Draffen, No. 44 West Union street, in honor of her eighth birthday. The afternoon was delightfully spent with games and at five o'clock the little folks were ushered into the dining room where a dainty refreshment was served. The dining room table was artistically decorated for the occasion the center piece being a beautiful birthday cake with eight lighted candles. She received a number of pretty and useful gifts. Among those present were Dorothy Huhne, Janet Phillips, Myra Scully, Florence Relyea and Eleanor O'Connor.

A card party and informal dance will be given by the Daughters of Israel on the evening of Thursday, April 29th, in Pythian Hall. The small sum of twenty-five cents will be charged for admission, which entitles one to play cards, either five hundred or euchre, for which pretty prizes will be given, and to dance, music being furnished by Malsenholder. Orangeade, ice cream and home made cake will be on sale throughout the evening, and a pleasant time is assured to all who will attend. The committee arranging this affair is composed of the following ladies: Mrs. Frank Messinger, chairman; Mrs. J. W. Leary, Mrs. William Rafferty, Mrs. Edgar T. Shultz, Mrs. John Molloy, Miss Nellie Sheppard, Miss Isabelle Howard, Miss Sadie Porter, Miss Alice Britt, Miss Jane Madden and Miss Larkin.

Dabbs-Wager.
On Thursday evening Miss Nellie Wager and John Dabbs were quietly united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wager in Wallkill. The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine. Only the members of the bride's family were present. Mr. Dabbs is of Laurel, Miss., and became acquainted with Miss Wager six years ago at Kingston during the Hudson-Fulton celebration. He was then serving in the navy on board the U. S. Torpedo Boat Shubrick.

Monday Club.
This week the Monday Club met at the home of Mrs. M. J. Michael. An invitation was received by the club to attend the meeting of the National Judicial District of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held at Poughkeepsie on Thursday, April 29th. The same was accepted and the president, Mrs. De Witt Roosa, Mrs. Francis J. Higginson and Mrs. Everett Fowler, will represent the Monday Club at that meeting. Next year's program on "Russia" was read and accepted. Members will choose their subjects at the next meeting, which will be the annual meeting, election of officers, and will be called at 3:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. V. V. Kenyon. Mrs. Whiting had the paper for the day, her topic being, "Rhodesia, the Last Stand of the Pioneers." Starting at Cairo, the Paris of Africa, the city, Mrs. Whiting gave a graphic description of the journey to Rhodesia was vividly pictured. There was the trip up the Nile; an account of the wonderful railroad of Africa was given, the difficulties of its building, etc. The journey was continued, touching Khartoum concerning which a comparison was made as to its location in the earliest days and today. Favorable comment was made upon the accomplishments of the young English officers. British East Africa was spoken of as the world's great hunting ground, a vast preserve, while in German East Africa, another great hunting ground, conditions are much more primitive and the hunter must rough it. The high altitude of Rhodesia was at once commented upon, and the visits of both Livingston and Stanley to this last stand of the pioneers were described. The gold mines, the agriculture, the mineral deposits were mentioned as among the wealth producing features of Rhodesia. While there are one million blacks and only twenty thousand whites there, so far, no race troubles of any moment have occurred. In fact the rigid enforcement of law in this frontier land, marks its notable difference from our own frontier conditions. The very interesting and informing paper closed with a final description of the "black man's home, ruled by the white man."

No Time to Get Divorce.
The Lawyer—"You really want a divorce?" The Wife—"Yes." The Lawyer—"All right. What about the alimony?" The Wife—"He can't pay any alimony." The Lawyer—"Eh! What is this—a practical joke? Take my advice, madam, and go back home and wait until he gets something. Fifty dollars, please."

Because It Had No Hard Usage.
A couple were discussing a certain cheap store, he in defense and she the negative. "Say, look at this pocket-book. I bought it for a dime almost a year ago. Not worn a bit," he said. "Well, that's because you don't take it out of your pocket enough," she said, and the argument was closed.—Kansas City Star.

Ferretting Out An Injustice

It Was All Done by a Young Lawyer For an Attractive Widow.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

There has been the same development in jurisprudence as in everything else. From the time of trial by battle to trial by jury there has been continued progress, and, strange to say, there are more reforms being considered today than ever before. In other words, confidence in the justice dispensed in our criminal courts is dying out.

The reason of this is that legal justice is mechanical, and mechanical contrivances do not always work. The many ingenious happenings that have been conjured up by detective story writers have doubtless helped to make people chary of believing in the infallibility of courts. I, as a criminal lawyer, have often, by thought and energy alone, turned the results of a month's trial into an absurdity. In the first place I judge of an accused person's innocence from intuition. After that I think and work—principally the latter.

I was in a criminal courtroom one day when a young woman was convicted of having sent a dose of chloral to her husband. I watched her countenance and made up my mind from its emotional expression that she was innocent. You may sneer at judgment from emotional expression, but it is often the basis of my efforts in my profession. If you ask me how I can tell innocence from guilt by such a process I am forced to admit that I cannot enlighten you.

The case I have referred to is this. Edith Atwater married, through the influence of her mother, Martin Haywood, an elderly man, who was wealthy. It was a May and December match, and December soon froze the sap of May. The couple lived unhappily together. Haywood was a chronic invalid, and this with age made him peevish. He was very parsimonious and would not have a doctor, constantly experimenting with remedies which he procured himself.

The usual way for a young wife to get rid of an old husband is by poison, and the favorite poison is arsenic. The arsenic is always discovered in the deceased's stomach, but this does not seem to deter candidates for widowhood from using it.

Old Haywood died under very suspicious circumstances. These were that he was ill for some time and no doctor was in attendance. No druggist in the town where he lived and died had sold him any medicines. How could a man die without a doctor or even a druggist to help him? The idea was preposterous. It was the neighbors who noticed these incongruities, and their tongues wagged at one another accordingly.

The rumors came to the knowledge of the police, who examined the body; a chemist made an analysis and found arsenic.

This was sufficient evidence in itself to convict his wife of having poisoned him. But the courts, which are instituted to give all accused persons the same chance before the law and use the same machinery for the innocent as for the guilty, insist upon putting both through the legal mill. A person brought up in refinement and morality is ground out through the same mill as a Black Hand murderer who, by a signal, informs a witness that if he tells the truth his life will pay the forfeit.

Mrs. Haywood was brought to trial, and, as I have said, I was in the courtroom when she was sentenced. She had been convicted by the law machine, twelve good and true men being its spokesmen, and was sentenced to life imprisonment. I knew that she was innocent. How? I have told you that I cannot tell you this. Scoffers have said that I mistook sympathy for intuition. Let them scoff.

I will admit that I went away from the courtroom with a heavy heart and that the agony of despair in that beautiful face haunted me. It continued to haunt me. When at the end of several months I found I could not get rid of it I determined that I must prove the innocence of the subject of it or continue to suffer indefinitely. I determined to begin a work for which I would receive no pecuniary compensation.

Having procured a copy of the evidence in Mrs. Haywood's case, after studying it I made up my mind, notwithstanding the fact that Haywood had bought no drugs during his illness, that he had taken more arsenic than was good for him. Whether it had produced his death or not did not matter. His widow had been convicted of killing him by giving him poison on the ground that he had not bought it himself and she had bought it. This was evidence enough for the court, but it was not enough for me.

I was tempted to go to the prison where Mrs. Haywood was confined and seek for points from her. But that is not in accordance with my methods. I preferred to work as a scientist, and a scientist should investigate independently of any influence. My theory being that Haywood had taken the drug himself, it behooved me to exhaust it before forming another.

Haywood had lived many years in the same town and the same house in which he died. I have said that he had never employed a physician. Nevertheless, to make sure, I inquired of every doctor in town if he had ever prescribed arsenic as a remedy for him. Not one of the profession remembered having even been called upon to treat him. I then eliminated the druggists in the same way. Not a druggist had ever sold him a particle of medicine. But one of them had sold Mrs. Haywood a considerable amount of arsenic with which to exterminate rats. At least this was her reason given for buying it. This druggist's evidence had been given at the trial and had much to do with the conviction.

Now, if Haywood had been used to buying medicines in the town when he wanted them my hope of proving that he had bought the arsenic which poisoned him would have been extinguished. Mrs. Haywood's legal defender had stopped at this point, either not considering the fact that the deceased had bought no medicine in the town at all, or if he had it probably did not occur to him that Haywood might have bought all his drugs somewhere else.

Persons who work for pay take such pains as it will pay them to take, and no more. Whoever takes more than this does it for love. I suppose I must admit that love was my incentive. My energies were bent upon proving that Haywood had bought the drug that killed him, and had I not fallen in love with the woman who had been convicted of killing him I would not have entered upon the matter at all.

Haywood having been a hypochondriac, I did not believe that he would get on without medicines. But, granting he had bought drugs secretly, to find the person who had sold them to him was like looking for a needle in a haystack. After inquiring of all the druggists in town I took in a circuit of the neighboring towns. I learned nothing for my pains.

It occurred to me that a possible reason for a man's concealing the place where he bought his medicines was that he was taking some nerve drug and desired to conceal his habit. In this case he would buy it secretly and might buy any other drug he wished in the same place. Haywood would have likely sent to the nearest large city for his dose, and that was a place of a million people, with a proportionate number of wholesale and retail druggists.

I went to the city myself, spending a week there, inquiring of every druggist whether he had ever sent Haywood any drug. No concern had done so. I was about to give up the matter when it occurred to me that one who would take pains to conceal his habit would not be likely to have the dose sent to his address direct. So I went the rounds again and asked every druggist if he had a record of sending drugs to any one in the place where Haywood had lived.

I found a number of druggists who had sent doses in very small quantities to A. R. Ingersoll at the general delivery of the postoffice. One of these druggists had sent Mr. Ingersoll at times a tonic of arsenic. I was struck with the fact that some of this tonic had been sent the person not very long before his death.

Eager to find whether Mr. Ingersoll and Mrs. Haywood were one and the same man, I returned home at once and began an investigation. No such person as A. R. Ingersoll was or had been a citizen of the place.

On inquiry at the postoffice I finally found a general delivery clerk who had delivered small packages to Mr. Ingersoll. He described Mr. Haywood.

Eureka!

I now went to the attorney who had defended Mrs. Haywood and gave him an account of my investigations, propounding a theory that Haywood had had a drug habit and had bought arsenic for a tonic. He communicated what I had learned to the prisoner, and a new trial was applied for.

I pleaded me to turn over the evidence I had elicited to Mrs. Haywood's attorney and keep in the dark myself. During the new trial I sat in the courtroom among the spectators and watched the prisoner as she eagerly drank in the evidence I had been at so much pains to hunt up without knowing that the man who had benefited her was looking at her.

When the evidence had all been placed before the court the prosecuting attorney made a motion that the judge instruct the jury to acquit the prisoner. The judge assented and the jury acquitted her without leaving their seats. I longed to go to the released woman and take her in my arms, but if I did this I preferred that it should not be in public.

The next day Mrs. Haywood's attorney told me that she had begged of him to explain how her case had been ferreted out and who had taken so much interest in her as to do the work. I permitted him to make an appointment for me to meet the young widow at his office the next morning.

At the hour named I was taken into the attorney's private office and was formally introduced to the woman I had been instrumental in releasing from life imprisonment.

I have given my story up to this point in full, and I doubt not that the reader is interested in knowing what occurred between me and Mrs. Haywood after being left alone together. Should I give an account of it the story might be spoiled for some who would fail to appreciate the tremendous importance of the work I had done for the lady and her action to a stranger in consequence. I will only say that when I had told her my story she asked me why I had taken so much trouble for her. Any one who has read the story will be able to judge of my reply, and some may correctly name its effect upon the widow.

GEORGE'S BAD SPELL

Washington Never Could Learn to Write Some Words Correctly.

Whoever heard that the great George Washington never could learn to spell correctly?

You see, it happened this way. When George was quite a young boy he came across a copy of an English book called the "Young Man's Companion," written in a "plain and easy style," as the title stated, which taught one how to write letters, wills, deeds, to survey, to navigate, to build houses, to make ink and elder, how to doctor the sick and how to conduct oneself in society, "all without the aid of a tutor."

Washington studied this book from cover to cover and from it acquired two qualities that clung to him through life. His handwriting, easy, flowing and legible, was modeled from the engraved "copy" sheet, and certain forms of spelling were learned that he never could correct.

To the end of his life Washington wrote lie, lye, har, lyar; ceiling, ceiling; oil, oyl, and blue, blew, as in his boyhood he had learned to do from this old book. Struggle as he did in trying to spell as the others of his day did, he never could be sure of certain words.—St. Louis Republic.

STREAKED WALLS.

Cold Surfaces Always Catch More Dust Than Hot Ones.

The reason that lath and plaster walls become streaked is explained by John Aitken, in Nature, as due to the tendency of hot air to deposit its dust on cold surfaces, and the colder the surface the weaker the power of resistance. So where the laths protect the plaster from the cold outside the plaster receives less deposit of dust than where it is between the laths.

Wherever a hot steam or water pipe comes through a wall a vertical streak of dust may be seen above it, due to the hot air driving the dust against the cold wall. Rooms that are heated by open grates are much less dusty than those heated by radiators because in the former the furniture is heated principally by radiation, and, being warmer than the air, it repels the particles of dust instead of catching them, while in the latter the air heats the furniture and in so doing deposits its dust on it.

Rooms lighted by electricity keep clean longer than those heated by gas simply because the light is almost cold. Mr. Aitken sums it up as follows: "Any surface hotter than the air keeps free from dust."

JOHN R. DOS PASSOS
WORLD PEACE A CHIMERA, SAYS EXPERT IN U. S. DEFENSE PLEA.

New York, April 20.—John R. Dos Passos, authority on International Law, believes the doctrine of universal peace is a chimera. "Its unchecked propaganda is baleful to our nation," he says. "It is not time to realize what has been taught by philosophers since the commencement of time, that men and nations can only be governed by force. With the conquest of Germany, there will be three powerful armies in the field, idle. The slightest misunderstanding with this country and one of those powers may precipitate these military hordes against us—feeble, unprotected, helpless."

At the hour named I was taken into the attorney's private office and was formally introduced to the woman I had been instrumental in releasing from life imprisonment.

MRS. RAYMOND ROBINS SAYS DIGNITY FOR WOMEN WORKERS COMES FROM LABOR UNIONS.

New York, April 19.—"The hope of working women is in trade unions," says Mrs. Raymond Robins, president of the National Woman's Trade Union League. "As long as woman stands alone she must be the victim of bad working conditions, long hours, unjustified low wages, slack seasons—organized, she becomes a power and is able to control the terms and conditions under which she works."

Mrs. Robins says that real freedom and dignity will come to working women only through solidarity in labor unions.

O'Connell's Big Head.

Thackeray was six feet two inches in height, and Sir H. W. Lucy says the great novelist wore a seven and five-eighths inch hat, beating Dickens and John Bright by a full half inch. Mr. Gladstone's hat was of seven and three-eighths inch measurement—the same as Macaulay's—while Beaconsfield needed a full seven inch. The hat of Daniel O'Connell, however, would have beaten them all, measuring eight and one-half inches by ten inches.

A MEXICAN MARRIAGE GIFT

Being a Story of Second-hand Furniture.

By F. A. MITCHEL

We have become so used to our own marriage customs that we do not realize that all over the world these customs vary. In Europe a prevailing requirement is that the bride shall furnish a dowry, even among the lower classes. In Russia there are a number of singular customs, the most unique of which is that a woman desiring to marry a man may go to his house and remain there till he marries her. If he puts her out her relatives will avenge the act as an insult. In northern Italy the matter of marriage is largely in the hands of brokers, but after an engagement is broken the man must pay all damages. In Japan a marriage may be contracted for a limited period, the man paying down a specified sum, which goes to the bride's parents.

In Mexico they have a custom different from any of these. The man pays all the wedding expenses, including a trousseau for the bride. He provides the wedding feast, with plenty of wine. The most expensive part of his outlay is furnishing the home.

Pepita Sierra, a Spanish girl of Mexico City, was a coquette. She was very pretty, with her olive and red complexion and long, Spanish lashes, which, when she dropped them over her flaming dark eyes before the admiring gaze of a man, rendered her very attractive. When she was fifteen—a marriageable age in Mexico—she was wooed by Leandro Ortiz, a wealthy man twenty years her senior, and, since he was well off, her father accepted him for her. She had never had a lover and was not averse to the wedding till she met a man nearer her own age, whom she liked better. The wedding outfit had been provided by her fiancé, and the ceremony was to take place in a few days. But this did not prevent Pepita from breaking off the match. Ortiz had provided the trousseau and the furniture. Being a gentleman descended from a Spanish grandee, he declined to take back the trousseau and insisted also on Pepita's retaining the furniture. Pepita's father protested against this, but Ortiz overcame his scruples, and the seniorita found herself in possession of all the fine clothes she would need for some time and a large storeroom filled with elegant furniture.

She did not succeed in catching the young man who had caused the break between her and Ortiz, so the outfit was not used. She wore the clothes that had been provided until the fashions changed, then gave them to the poor, but the furniture remained in storage.

Pepita, though she had many minor affairs of the heart, did not become engaged again till she was twenty; then she was betrothed to Joaquin Molina. This time she was very much in love. Molina, who was full of romance, told her that he had never loved and never could love any one but her. Of course Pepita responded that she had never loved any one but him. All went pleasantly between the pair until the wedding day was set. Then Joaquin told his fiancée that they would better set a day when they would go together and select the furniture for their home.

By this time Pepita had grown clean out of childhood and had begun to look to the pecuniary requirements of life. Her fiancé was not wealthy, and her father could do very little for her in the way of dowry. There was plenty of furniture in storage that needed only to be brought forth and placed in the house the couple would occupy. Pepita would not be averse to this. Women are accustomed to receive gifts, and she had no compunction as to using what had been provided by one lover in establishing a home with another. But what would Señor Molina say to doing so?

Molina was very sensitive. If she told him that she possessed furniture that had been given her by one whom she had expected to marry it would bring up a matter that might have an unpleasant effect on her present lover. On the other hand, Molina could not afford—so she believed—to provide such handsome furniture as that already possessed, and why should money be thus wasted?

She tried hard to bring herself to broach the matter to Molina, but dared not do so. Then it occurred to her to sell what furniture had been provided, turning it into money. She made inquiries as to what she could get for it and was surprised to find that although it was as good as new it must be sold for secondhand furniture and would not bring 20 per cent of cost.

Pepita would not have been a woman if she could have consented to this sacrifice. What a pity that men were so averse to using anything as a husband that had been provided by a former lover of his wife's! If she could arrange to utilize the furniture a few years after marriage, when their love had become more practical, the difficulty might be overcome. But between lovers on the eve of marriage, when there was so much sentiment involved, a spark might blow the whole affair sky high.

Nevertheless Señorita Sierra followed a course to which women are much given. A man would probably have sacrificed the furniture rather than risk breaking off the match. Pepita took the risk of losing the man she loved rather than sacrifice the furniture. After a long debate with herself and much effort in screwing up her courage she introduced the subject to Molina, choosing one evening when they were together alone enjoying some viands of especial delicacy and a bottle of wine. When her lover had eaten the former and drunk the latter Pepita, drawing his arm around her waist and leaning her head on his breast, said:

"Joaquin, dear."

"What, sweetheart?"

"I've been thinking that I should do something to relieve the strain that you will have to bear in providing for our wedding."

"Don't worry about that, dear. I can handle the matter."

"But there is one large item of expense—the largest item—that is really not necessary you should incur."

"What is that, pet?"

"Why, in the matter of furniture."

"The furniture?"

"Yes. I have some very nice furniture that will make us very comfortable."

"You have?"

"Yes—that is, if you would act sensibly about using furniture that was provided."

She was stilled.

"Provided how?"

"It was bought at a time when"—

"When?"

"Did I ever tell you that when I was a child I was engaged to marry?"

"What?"

"A man a great deal older than myself. He was old enough to be my father."

"Do you mean to tell me that you had been engaged before giving yourself to me?"

He had drawn away from her and was looking at her with a cold stare.

"Haven't I ever mentioned it before?"

"Mentioned it! No! You told me that I was the only man you ever loved."

"Did I?"

"Yes, and now you tell me that you have been engaged before."

There was an awful pause between them which Joaquin broke.

"What has this to do with the furniture?" he asked.

"Why, it was provided—provided by the man to whom"—

"Heavens! What an awful deception! I can never excuse it—never, never."

He buried his face in his hands.

"Joaquin, dear, why do you set so much store by something that happened ever so long ago, when I was a mere child and knew nothing of love?"

"Knew nothing of love! Were you going to marry a man you didn't love?"

"I thought I did."

"How did you find out that you didn't?"

Here was another stumper. Pepita did not reply.

"Come! Confess all since you are about it."

After a long silence the rest came out haltingly.

"I was young and giddy. A man about my own age attracted me, and—I broke with the other."

"Oh, you really fell in love this time?"

No answer.

"Well, what became of this second love affair?"

"It didn't come to anything."

"Why not?"

There was a terrible temptation to lie, but Pepita was a good girl and would not lie even to retain the man she loved.

"He didn't fancy me."

Instead of appreciating Pepita's honesty Joaquin went off into a passionate tirade about having been deceived. He rose while venting his spleen and, with a wave of the hand and a formal bow, said:

"All is over between us!"

Then he swept out of the room.

Pepita was not crushed. She followed him with her eyes in a sort of wonder, while within her was breaking a revolution as real as that in her lover's emotional. His unreasonableness, his injustice, stood out in contrast with the generosity of Leandro Ortiz, who had refused to hold her or to blame her when he learned that she had given her heart to another, but had insisted on her keeping all his gifts.

When Joaquin's outburst had subsided it began to dawn upon him that he had made a fool of himself. He passed the next day in indecision and in the evening, having repented, went to Pepita for a reconciliation. He received word by a servant that Señorita Sierra was engaged. He turned away with a cry of anguish.

Señor Ortiz had never married. He had given his heart to Pepita when she was little more than a child, and she still held it as a woman.

There is a celebration in Mexico City called the battle of flowers. When the next anniversary of this fete came round after Señorita Sierra broke with Joaquin Molina she was riding within a line of carriages in the Chapultepec park meeting another line of carriages, while persons in both lines were pelting each other with roses. Suddenly Pepita caught sight of Leandro Ortiz coming. As he passed he was struck in the face with a rose. Looking at his assailant, he saw Pepita smiling at him.

Ortiz considered the rose and the smile a recall. The same evening he saw Pepita and their engagement was renewed.

Within a short time after the new engagement the furniture that had been the means of its donor's recall was sold and the house in which the couple began their married life was provided with an entirely new outfit.

HOME COMFORTS AT THE FRONT

ALL THE COMFORTS OF HOME ALONG FRENCH BATTLE FRONT.

French soldiers are shown herewith preparing their spring and summer quarters. As may be seen, the snow is now off the ground, the frost is out, and they can go about making themselves comfortable. The building is some distance behind the firing line, but still well within the range of gunfire. It is no ordinary shack, as may be noted by the hinged door, the glass window, the weather-paper protection for the roof, etc. The soldier on the roof is placing wattle boughs there so the buildings will not be distinguishable to an aeroplane observer, who might then signal to a German battery half a dozen miles away to plump a shot into it.

"Songs Our Grandmothers Sang"

ONE of the features that will be presented by the Boston Oratorio Artists on the last day of our Chautauqua program will be "Songs Our Grandmothers Sang." They will dress in costumes of the American period of 1850.

There will be numerous other features that will make their programs notable. The Oratorio Artists are among the highest salaried oratorio singers in New England and will give a number of short oratorios by the best composers.

SUBMARINE CABLES.

Placed End to End They Would Reach Halfway to the Moon.

The various governments of the world own together 880 cables, having a total length of 14,480 miles and containing 21,590 miles of conductors. The French government, which takes the lead as to length of cables, has 3,460 miles in fifty-four cables. As to number, the Norwegian government comes first, with 235 cables, having a total length of 248 miles. Finally, as to the length of conductors, the English government comes first, with 5,468 miles of conductors, divided among 115 cables, having a total length of 1,588 miles. Private companies to the number of twenty-eight own 288 cables, having a length of 126,864 miles and containing 127,632 miles of conductors.

The French companies, only two in number—the Compagnie Française du Telegraphie de Paris et New York and the Societe Française des Telegraphes Sous-Marins—have eighteen cables with a total length of 7,249 nautical miles. The most important of the private companies is the Eastern Telegraph company, which operates seventy-five cables, with a total length of 25,347 miles. The total number of cables in the world is 1,168, with a total length of 140,347 miles and 149,193 miles of conductors. This is not sufficient to reach to the moon, but would extend more than halfway there.—London Tit-Bits.

The Ancient Brahmins.

The Brahmins were the lawyers, priests, professors, the sole instructed class, the sole authorities on taste, morality, the sole disinterested of whatever stood in the place of science. Everybody was to minister unto them, everybody to give way to them. The Brahmin was above the law. He was "not to be subjected to corporal punishment, must not be imprisoned or fined or exiled or reviled." In the law of the Vishnu it was written: "The Brahmins sustain the world. It is by the favor of the Brahmins that the gods reside in heaven." Under English rule and ideas the ancient caste has lost some of its prestige, but is still a forcible reminder of its former grandeur.—New York American.

An Early Legal Blunder.

Dyeing, or, at any rate, the madder root used in it, was the subject of one of the oddest of England's legislative blunders. In the reign of George III, it was found necessary to regulate the trade in madder, and accordingly an act was passed for that purpose. Tests of its purity were ordained, and various regulations spread the length of the act to over sixty sections. But when it was finally passed into law it was found that madder was not once mentioned by name in it. In fact, those called upon to administer it had no official knowledge of what the act was talking about.—London Telegraph.

Ironwork in India.

India was the first country which turned iron into weapons. Persia borrowed the art from India. The Rigveda, which is the oldest record in the world, gives evidence of this. So do also the Astras and Sastras of the Dharmashastra, and during the early part of the Christian era the Indian blade was the most used throughout the eastern and western world. This art reached its greatest perfection in northern India, the Punjab, Nepal, Rajputana, Gujarat and other provinces, where they still make beautiful arms.

LIBERTY BELL WILL BE SENT TO FAIR.

Philadelphia, April 20.—Liberty Bell, the treasured emblem of the birth of the nation's independence, will be shipped to San Francisco and exhibited at the Panama Pacific International Exposition as a result of the efforts of William Randolph Hearst, who will also stand the $30,000 expense incidental to transporting it to the coast and back in a private car with a committee accompanying it.

BAKED CIGARS.

Before Smoking the English Dry Out All Spirits and Nicotine.

The English bake their cigars thoroughly in the oven until all of the moisture and nicotine are dried out. As is well known, they have the pick of the tobacco crop over there, and what they apply to the best of cigars might well be administered to those of inferior quality which are smoked in America. Here is what every smoker should do: First, loosen the cigars in the box and let them stand on or near a stove or radiator until absolutely dry.

A moment before smoking wash the cigar in water on the outside and dampen well the wrapper. This may be done at the table by holding the cigar by the tip in a glass of drinking water, taking care not to wet the filter. Then wipe the tip end before cutting it off on the napkin. Water revives the leaf and restores its natural flavor.

What you have previously dried out in the oven is not water moisture. It is the bay rum and other spirits which are frequently sprinkled over the cigars after boxing to keep them looking fresh. Both the wholesaler and the retailer often sprinkle them again before showing them to customers. It is these spirits that impart such a strong odor to clothes in which cigars are carried. Drying and washing afterward will make for a better smoke, to say nothing of better health, in cases where very cheap spirits have been used on the cigars.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Easy to End Dissension.

Much of our dissension is due to misunderstanding, which could be put right by a few honest words and a little open dealing.—Black.

CARRANZA WINS
AND REVOLT BREWS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, April 20.—The end of the reign in Mexico of General Francisco Villa is in sight, according to the general belief in official circles today.

Consular dispatches to the state department confirm the Carranza claims of a great victory by General Obregon at Culiacan. They told of Villa's retreat northward. These reports together with other official reports stating that the Carranza forces appear to be winning on the west coast, strengthen the belief that Carranza is about to gain the ascendancy in the revolution-torn republic for the present at least. Other reports reaching Washington have indicated that Villa's defeat has caused his men to lose much of their former respect for him and that thousands are deserting.

Military experts believe that Villa with the remnant of his forces, is making for the American border.

Border reports today indicated, however, that Carranza soon may have another revolt on his hands. These advices tell of a gathering of followers of the former Dictator Huerta.

The crack Crescent A. C. defeated the fast Knickerbocker A. C. on Sunday afternoon at the bushlot grounds on the corner of 7 to 3. Robinson on the mound for the Crescents had the Knicks at his mercy and breezed thirteen of them by the strikeout route. McMahon was at the receiving end and his work was flawless. The battery for the Knicks was Strubel, Stitzel and Bush. The features of the game were the work of Robinson and McMahon and the hitting of the whole Crescent team. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, April 20.—There was constant variation in the tone of the stock market this morning and price movements during the first 15 minutes reflected the conflicting influences of continued heavy realizing offset by vigorous buying. This purchasing which was done through commission houses, caused brisk advances, which were followed quickly by sharp reactions. This situation was most pronounced in Reading, which after advancing  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 154  $\frac{1}{2}$  declined to 153  $\frac{1}{2}$ . Amalgamated Copper receded  $\frac{1}{2}$  at the outset to 74  $\frac{1}{2}$  and then rose to 75  $\frac{1}{2}$ . Lehigh Valley opened  $\frac{1}{2}$  higher at 145 but on the next few sales dropped to 143  $\frac{1}{2}$ . Union Pacific was in good demand, moving up  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 133. U. S. Steel Common gained  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 57  $\frac{1}{2}$ . Utah Copper improved a point to 66. Rock Island was under pressure, the first sales being recorded as four thousand shares from 32 to 31, a loss of 3 points from yesterday's close with a later rally to 32  $\frac{1}{2}$ . The heaviness of this stock, together with the pronounced weakness in Rock Island five yesterday, was the subject of a good deal of comment. Mexican Petroleum jumped  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 93, followed by a reaction to 91  $\frac{1}{2}$ .

Noon.—The strong tone which was shown at the opening was followed by a general rally of the speculative situation due chiefly to the heavy offerings of Rock Island which declined  $\frac{1}{2}$  points to 23  $\frac{1}{2}$ . Most of the leading issues lost all of their early gains. Erie declined from 29  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 28  $\frac{1}{2}$  and Maxwell Motors yielded to 45, a loss of 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  points. Central Leather dropped to 40  $\frac{1}{2}$ , a loss of 8 points, and Southern Railway to 15  $\frac{1}{2}$ . American Can was about the strongest issue, rising one point to 36  $\frac{1}{2}$ . Money loaning at 2 per cent.

2:30 p. m.—Prices again moved upward in the first half of the last hour's trading. Maxwell Motors were prominent, selling around 49 against 45 at noon. Bethlehem Steel was conspicuous, advancing from 133 to 141. The tone was strong.

The stock market closed buoyant. Governments unchanged; other bonds strong except Rock Islands.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, April 20.—The promoters of the Johnson-Willard fight lost money. The exact amount is shrouded in the maze of many conflicting statements concerning receipts, but the estimates as to the loss range from $3,000 to $43,000. It is the opinion of the writer that the $43,000 loss figure is nearer being correct than any other.

Jack Curley, chief promoter of the fight, after being asked a half dozen times for the real figures, said two days after the fight:

"I can't give the exact figures now, but we are saying that the receipts were $110,000."

Curley, as will be noticed, didn't make the direct statement that the receipts were $110,000. He merely said "we are saying." His "we are saying" statement has been disputed by three persons who were on the "inside."

Dick Klein, director general of the affair, said on the day after the fight:

"The receipts will not reach $70,000."

On the night following the fight, Tom Jones, manager for Jess Willard, said:

"I don't know what the receipts are exactly but I understand they are somewhere around $60,000. I make that statement because I know that Willard's share of the receipts will be around $15,000 and he was to get 25 per cent of the gross receipts, including money taken in at the gate and money received for concessions."

Jack Robinson, who acted as press agent for the fight, said:

"I learn that the receipts were $56,900."

There also has been a big dispute as to what the attendance was. The promoters of the fight backed away from giving the exact figures, or even approximate figures. That left it up to the newspaper men at the ringside to estimate the crowd. Most of them are mighty good at estimating, and the consensus of opinion was that the whole crowd didn't total over 12,000 and that it might have scaled down to 10,000. Of that number it was said that a thousand and probably two thousand were admitted on complimentary tickets.

It cost the promoters close to $70,000 to stage the fight in Havana. That amount included the $32,000 that was paid to Jack Johnson. To this figure must be added about $15,000 more that was lost through the Juarez fizzle, as the promoters went to a lot of expense there.

When Willard signed for the fight in Juarez he was to get only 25 per cent of the net profits. That would have made his share nothing at all had the same arrangement held over for Havana. But Jones said that he figured the fight might not draw well in Havana and that the net receipts, if any, would be small.

"So I insisted," said Jones, "that Willard be given twenty-five per cent of the gross receipts if the fight were held in Havana."

If the gross receipts were around $60,000, as the writer has every reason to believe, they were, Willard's share was about $15,000, as Jones stated. The expense of staging the fight was about $70,000, according to the promoters, and they lost $15,000 at Juarez. That means that the fight cost them a total of approximately $100,000.

If the receipts were only $56,900, as Robinson said, it shows the net loss was $43,100, according to approximate figures on expenses.

Even if the promoters did take in $110,000 as Curley said "we are saying" the promoters would have lost on the affair, as in that case Willard's share would have been around $28,000, the Havana expenses $70,000 and the Juarez expenses $15,000 making a total expense of $113,000.
